Peter Smith, Homer Township Electrocuted By Live Wire

Tragedy struck suddenly at the home of Mr. Peter Smith located on a farm on the Will-Cook Road near 143rd street Thursday morning about 3 a.m.

Mrs. Smith was awakened by a bright light appearing on the road in front of their farm home. She awakened Mr. Smith and the rest of the family, who discovered the sparks and light coming from a high-tension wire going by their place. As the son at once called the Public Service Co., Mr. Smith went out to investigate as he had a large wood pile and the farm buildings were near the fire, and as he did so he accidentally stumbled on a loose end of the wire which carried a voltage of 2400, and was instantly killed.

The Public Service Co. came at once and removed the body from the wire.

Mr. Smith was born May 3, 1895 in Orland Township where he lived all his life.

On March 15, 1919, he was united in marriage with Miss Carrie Holm.

Surviving are his wife and one son Peter Jr.; three daughters, Mrs. Everett Heatherwick of Tinley Park, Mrs. Thomas Wagner at home and Miss Lila Smith of Chicago; his parents Mr. and Mrs. Martin Smith Sr., and four brothers, Martin of Mokena, Edward of Lemont, Alex of Plainfield and Walter of Orland Park; two sisters, Mrs. Margaret Williams of East Troy, Wis., Mrs. Ed. Skating Pond Project Up To Frankfort Youths

The village board of Frankfort met in regular session, Monday evening, October 7.

Since Mr. Walter Heisner had resigned from the board, due to the fact of having been transferred to Whiting, Indiana, where he is now employed, it was necessary to fill his place. Since the mayor has the power to make this appointment, he duly appointed Mr. Fred Weichselsberger to serve the balance of the term.

The Halloween question came up for discussion, resulting as follows: If the youngsters want a skating pond this winter, they are requested to refrain from mischievous pranks, which would require policing the village and hence the money which could be spent for making the ball ground into a pond, would have to be used to pay a policeman. Then there would be no skating pond.

It is hoped that parents will co-operate with the Village Board in this matter.

NOTICE!

Due to the heavy increase in operating expenses we are forced to increase the subscription rates of this newspaper from $2.00 to $2.50 per year.

During the past four years the price of newspaper has increased in price three times; twice during the past year, the last increase being three weeks ago.

We have absorbed all these increases and added expenses in the past but at this time we find we cannot do so any longer and are compelled to make the above decision.

We hope to continue to make the paper worthy of this situation. Newspaper is, as everyone knows, in a serious condition. One of our paper houses has informed us that one of the mills supplying them, has notified them that they are severing all connections with United States business firms and are shipping their paper to foreign countries. It is understood, mostly to South American countries, where they get three times the prices paid in this country.

We see a direct attack in this situation on the freedom of the press, if the newspaper of this country goes to foreign shores where the press is controlled by the government. Only in this country, where we have diversified advertising, do we have freedom of the press.

It has been suggested that readers write to their congressmen concerning the exporting of newspaper, when it is needed so badly at home.

New Lenox Village Board Passes Liquor Ordinance

An ordinance providing for licensing and regulating the sale of intoxicating liquors in the Village of New Lenox was passed at a special meeting of the Village Board Friday evening, Oct. 11.

The intent of the ordinance, as set forth in its preamble, is to protect the health and welfare of New Lenox residents as well as to foster temperance in the consumption of alcoholic liquors.

The ordinance fixes the total number of licenses issued to one for every 500 persons in the village. Licenses may not be issued to non-residents, to persons not of good character and reputation or to persons who have been convicted of a felony. It is also provided that no alcoholic liquor shall be sold within 300 feet of any church, cemetery, school, hospital, etc. No slot machines or other gambling devices which pay off in money are permitted in taverns. Violation carries a penalty of revocation of license, as well as a fine up to $200. The annual fee for licenses which local taverns would be required to obtain is $400.

The ordinance becomes effective ten days after its passage, approval, signing, recording and publication as required by law.

Carl F. Eggers, Aged 72, Retired Farmer, Dies At Home Mon.

Two years ago Mr. Eggers started to work for the U. S. He was of a kindly disposition and a loving husband and father. He was a life-long member of the St. John's Brotherhood.

Reckless Boys Throw Stones Thru Church Windows

It seems we should say reckless parents, for it is now definitely established by educators and law enforcing officers that when children and young people do vandalism and mischievous things that are of a criminal or otherwise nature, that the parents are to blame. Because of such things occurring, is the reason why schools for parents have been established, and when children are apprehended in vandalism parents are sent to these schools to learn how to control and rear their offsprings.

For some time during the past summer, the officials of the St. John's Evangelical church in Mokena have noticed the copper gutters on the building were being hit with rifle shots which made many holes and required repairs. The electric light which is at the rear east basement door is being broken by rifle shots as soon as a new one is installed. To those who need to use this entrance at night it is very trying to ascend or descend the steps in the dark.

During the summer, the officials of the church spent nearly a thousand dollars to protect the stained glass windows in the auditorium and basement of the church by covering them with a clear glass window which acted as an added protection from hail and storms in general.

This work had just been completed and last week one of the large memorial windows in the auditorium on the east side and two windows in the basement were broken by stones thrown by boys. It will require another large expense to have these workmen return from Chicago and replace the broken glass.

The church officials have been very patient but now have decided to take action and are now offering a liberal reward for information leading to the identity of the guilty parties.

It is an established fact that the children of parents who respect other peoples property and who are concerned that their children shall grow into noble manhood and womanhood, do not do things of this nature and that is the reason authorities are now sending parents to schools of correction. Instead of their innocent children, let's have an end to such exhibition of reckless parents as shown by such deeds as this, done by their offsprings.

Loan Aid to Veterans

Through August, 1946, Veterans' administration has guaranteed a total of 293,931 home, farm and business loans under the G.I. Bill, according to an announcement by Thomas B. King, recently named director of VA loan guarantee service.

King, who has been serving as assistant director, became active director upon the recent resignation of F. X. Pavesich, who formerly headed the service. King is a navy veteran with three years' active duty in World War II.

The total face value of VA guaranteed loans amounts to $1,429,331,000, of which the VA has guaranteed or insured $657,958,000 and of which approximately 90 per cent is for homes.

Recent appointment of J. Glenn Corbitt, employee of Veterans' administration since 1924, in charge of the office of insular and foreign relations, takes the service of the VA abroad to look after veterans' affairs and to co-ordinate with the department of state all activities in foreign countries.

Questions and Answers

Q. Has the state of Wisconsin ever given a bonus for World War II veterans? Have any other states done so? I took out a government insurance policy while in the army in 1936 and 1937 for only nine months. It was a $1,000 policy, ordinary life. Could I get a cash surrender of this policy? If so, to whom do I write? —R. J. K., Oakland, Calif.

A. Only three states now are paying veterans' bonus to World War II veterans. They are Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Vermont. Maine passed a law subject to referendum but at the recent election voters rejected the law. Rhode Island, Illinois and Michigan have passed veterans' bonus laws subject to a referendum at the November election. New York also has passed a similar law, but it must be approved by the next legislature and then be subject to a referendum vote. No other states have as yet passed such laws.

A peacetime government life insurance policy does have a cash surrender value. Suggest you write to Insurance Division, Veterans' Administration, Washington, D. C.

Q. I would appreciate so much if I could hear from some of the boys who were in Company E, 182nd infantry on Bougainville island in March, 1944. My son, James M. Smith Jr., was reported wounded March 11 and died March 14. He was operating a machine gun. I have tried to get information concerning his death from the chaplain and government officials and through the Red Cross. All I have heard is that he was hit by shell fragments and died shortly after reaching the hospital. Any information you can give will be highly appreciated. —Mrs. James M. Smith, Route 1, Glen Allen, Ala.

A. I hope boys of Company E, 182nd infantry, see this appeal and communicate with Mrs. Smith. Suggest that you write to Casualty Branch, Office of Adjutant General, War Department, Washington 25, D. C., give them your son's full name, serial number, rank and regiment and all details you have. If they have additional information, they will inform you.

Q. My husband, after being in the army since 1939, was discharged last March. After he had been out two weeks over his 90 days, he enlisted in the navy for six years. I've been told I'll get an allotment. I'd like to know if that is true. Also if he is compelled to make out one to my child and myself. If so can he cancel it at any time he wants to? We have no divorce and are not planning one, but he tries not to support us if he can.—B.J.D., Denver, Colo.

A. Usually the serviceman applies to his commanding officer for an allotment for his dependents. Is the child his child? If your husband does not apply for an allotment, then suggest that you write to the Chief, Navy Personnel, Navy Department, Washington 25, D. C., and explain the situation and ask for the forms to make application for an allowance yourself. They will determine your eligibility.

Q. My husband entered the service September 3, 1942, and was discharged September 2, 1943. I received only 10 allotment checks while he was in service. Am I entitled to any more allotments from the government? I now am divorced from my husband.—Mrs. J. L. C., New Albany, Miss.

A. You are entitled to allotments from the time your husband applied for allotments. Suggest you write to the Bureau of Dependency Benefits, U. S. Army, Newark 2, New Jersey.

W. N. U. SERVICE

Mark Darrell, young American lumberman, is boss of a lumber camp near St. Victor, Canada. He and his assistant, Nat Page, soon discover that they are very unpopular in the French-Canadian village. When they seek lodging at the hotel, they are told it is full. An angry mob gathers and one man attacks Mark with a knife. Madame Kinross quiets the men, then asks Mark to cancel the lease. Mark refuses. A moment later Horace Broussac, Madame Kinross' lawyer, arrives. He offers Mark $6,000 for rescinding the lease, but Mark again refuses. Broussac is visibly angered at this, but promises that he will not interfere with the lumbering operations.

CHAPTER III

Mark had arranged for a supply of money—three thousand dollars, in fact—to be sent by registered mail. Monsieur Vitard, who was also the postmaster, would ensure its safety. Two schooners were to arrive in a week's time, to receive the two thousand cords of lumber stacked at the spillways. The next week would show pretty well what Mark's prospects were.

On the morning after their arrival, Mark and Nat made an inspection of the mill. It stood on a stretch of flat terrain between the base of the cliffs and the St. Lawrence. Where the St. Victor emptied into the Gulf, a strong log boom had been constructed, forming an artificial lake for the reception of the lumber. Some three hundred yards above it was a rather primitive dam meant to hold back the flood waters and ease the logs over it into the lake below.

"Not much of a mill," said Mark to Nat, as they stood looking at the silent barkers. "Cheap dynamos, cheap everything. We need grinders, couche-rolls and presses, to turn out the finished product."

"Which means plenty of money," said Mark.

"More than we've got to risk. But, shipping the logs, one turns the bulk of the profits over to the paper-makers up the Gulf. However, if Broussac really has two thousand cords at the skidways, that gives us a leeway. Maybe next season we can begin to think of couche-rolls and paper-making."

"Broussac's got something up his sleeve."

"He'll have to bring it down."

The mill office was a sound, substantial structure, with two bedrooms above, and well heated by stoves.

"I guess we'll move in tomorrow," said Mark.

"I think we could be comfortable here," Nat agreed.

Pipelon, a fawning, weedy young fellow, who appeared to be bookkeeper, and also to run the tiny store, assured them that that was the case. He, Pipelon, would be responsible for that. Also, he would procure a woman to cook and sweep for them. He unlocked the safe and produced the books. Mark spent an hour studying them.

There appeared to be no reason why the little mill had been a failure in Broussac's hands, unless the lawyer was unable to procure the money to develop it. Having looked through the books, Mark took the trail with Nat up one side of the St. Victor, to inspect the spillways.

Foreman Larousse
Goes Back to Work

Mark was surprised that Broussac seemed to have told the truth about those two thousand cords. Men were at work finishing the stacking, sawyers were cutting trees into lengths, and the grating of saws rang everywhere through the woods. A little group of workmen gathered about the two.

"I'm your new boss," said Mark. "I want to tell you that I'm prepared to carry on for the next year, and anybody who wants his job can keep it. If you've any complaints bring them to me. I'm going to try to fix up your homes, to make them more comfortable."

They eyed him silently, with all the suspicion of the Habitant. As in St. Victor, Mark saw furtive glances exchanged.

"How many of you are from St. Victor?" he asked.

Mark had understood that Broussac had had to employ outside labor. He was surprised when all the group but two admitted to being St. Victor men.

"Well, who's your foreman?" he asked.

"He does not work for you any more. You have discharged him," volunteered one of the group.

"Discharged him? I haven't discharged anyone. I hope I won't have to. What's his name?"

"Louis Larousse, Monsieur."

A light dawned upon Mark. The big man with the knife whom he had had to pummel outside the hotel.

"Where does he live?" he asked.

"The white and black house facing the mill."

"I'll go and see him. I haven't discharged him—yet. You've done fine work," Mark added. "If I get these logs safely shipped, we'll be all set for the summer."

He didn't think it advisable to mention that he was contemplating raising their two dollars a day to two-fifty, itself less than the standard in the more settled parts of the Province. One had to go slow with these fellows.

Striding back down the trail with Nat, Mark glanced back and saw that the group had drawn together, and were watching him, and whispering.

"If that crowd is St. Victor men, we'll have to watch them closely," said Nat.

"On the other hand, we've got them where we want them. Broussac's been underpaying them, and I'm planning to raise them fifty cents a day. I think," said Mark, "we've got them."

Larousse recognized Mark, and his face, which was badly bruised, grew sullen. One eye was entirely closed, and his lip was swollen badly. He glowered at Mark in silence.

"I understand you're the foreman of the gang," said Mark. "Why aren't you at work?"

"Because you have discharged me," Larousse grunted.

"How do you get that?"

"When a man beats me in the face, he discharges me. I will not work for him. I am not a dog. I am a man," said Larousse sullenly.

The frowsy woman came to the doorway, and burst into a paroxysm of shrill expostulations that Mark could hardly understand. He gathered, however, that she was shrill.

Mark put the men to work upon the boom.

ing invective against her husband for being out of work, and ordering him to make his peace with Mark.

"Well, you came at me with a knife," said Mark. "I want you to stay on the job." The job meant three dollars a day to Larousse, a nice little income in St. Victor. Mark put out his hand.

"Let's forget it," he said again.

"You mean you—you want me to remain as foreman?" stammered Larousse.

"Why, you're still foreman," answered Mark, "and your wages are going on."

"Ah, Monsieur!" The big man's face worked convulsively. Madame Larousse came stumbling forward, peering into Mark's face. "Monsieur! Monsieur!"

"It's quite all right," said Mark. "Take the day off, Larousse. Get on the job tomorrow. I'm going to need you badly when the ice goes out. We've got to put those logs through the mill. I've got a couple of schooners coming up in about a week's time. I'm depending on you—do you understand?—on you!"

Mark Gets Acquainted
With His Workmen

Larousse stood staring at Mark, apparently tongue-tied, but his wife seized Mark's hand in hers and kissed it.

"That's okay," said Mark. "Come along Nat, let's move our things."

Mark put the gang to work, upon the boom. The spillways were full, the few trunks remaining to be sawed didn't amount to much. It was the boom that seemed the weak point of the outfit.

The snows were melting fast, and water was pouring over the dam from a score of freshets. Within a week the ice would go out of the St. Victor. Then the gorge would be filled with a torrent of seething water. And it would be necessary to release the logs carefully from the skids, to prevent a jam that might break suddenly and hurl the whole mass of lumber against the boom.

The wooden boom was strong, but it wasn't as strong as freshet water. For three days Mark drove his crew, plugging the boom and tightening weak spots in it with logs and chains. Larousse, back on the job, took direct charge of these operations.

The crew worked well, but there was the same furtive attitude on their part, and Mark had an uneasy feeling that something was brewing.

On the third evening of his taking up his residence at the office, he was surprised by a visit from Monsieur Lacombe, the portly cure.

"I trust I do not intrude, Monsieur?" asked the priest, when Pipelon ushered him up to Mark's room.

"No, Father, sit down," said Mark. "It's a pleasure to see you."

They talked vaguely for a minute or two; then Father Lacombe looked Mark straight in the eyes.

"I have come, Monsieur Darrell, to advise you to relinquish your lease of the St. Victor property," he said.

"Why?" Mark shot back.

The cure sat bolt upright, his hands upon his knees. "You see, Monsieur, when the lease was agreed upon, Madame Kinross was in great need of money," he said. "Now she has enough. And she has that sentiment about her husband."

"Broussac told me he was drowned at sea, when the ice-floe became detached. He was never heard of again. That was five years ago."

"Yes, Monsieur," agreed the cure. "Nevertheless, Madame Kinross has that settled conviction—monomania, if you like—that her husband is still alive. And she feels that she has done wrong to alienate part of his property. You see, she was a Kinross too, a distant connection of the seigneurs. She married him when she was barely sixteen—half-an-hour before the sealing-fleet sailed. It was not an ordinary marriage."

"I don't see," said Mark, "that I am called upon to cancel a business undertaking without more solid reason. After all, I am bringing money into the seignior."

He was convinced the cure was being made a cat's paw by Broussac, who had received a more advantageous offer, but it would do no good to go into that.

"So you are not willing to reconsider, Monsieur?" asked the priest. "I should advise it, urge it. You cannot succeed against the sentiment of the people here."

Mark shook his head. Father Lacombe sighed and rose. "Ah, well, I have said all that I came to say," he observed. He shook hands. There was a look of sadness on his finely chiseled features; it flashed through Mark's mind that Father Lacombe hadn't told him as much as he might have done.

"I'm glad you called, Father, and I hope we're going to be good friends," he said.

The freshets had already started. There was still ice in the gorge, but it was rapidly filling with water, held back by the dam, through whose spillways cascades were now pouring down into the dam lake beneath. One of the two schooners that Nat had hired was already anchored in the deep water off the end of the flume.

It was time to begin to release the logs from the skids. Mark, leaving the office soon after sunrise, after Nat and he had made themselves a pot of coffee, was surprised to see his men gathered in front of the cabins, apparently unprepared to start for their work.

A woman was shrilly screaming from a cabin, others were at their doors; it looked as if something of consequence was happening.

Larousse was seated sullenly on his door-sill, a pipe stuck into a corner of his mouth. As Mark moved toward him, the crowd closed up behind.

"Well, what's the trouble?" asked Mark. "Stand up when I speak to you!" he added, seeing that Larousse looked as if he was again set for trouble.

A Strike Threatens
To Ruin Everything

Larousse got slowly to his feet. "The men say they will not work for two dollars a day, to make you outsiders rich," he announced sullenly. "They say they are poor men, and they toil all day for just enough money to support their families."

"A strike?" queried Mark.

"Yes, we strike, we all strike," shouted Larousse. "We want five dollars a day—and six for me, because I am foreman. If you don't want to pay, you can lose your lumber."

The demand was a preposterous one; it was evidently made in the anticipation of refusal. Mark found himself mentally computing how much Broussac was staking on the issue of his speculation.

Mark laughed into the sullen faces about him. "You will have to move out of the cabins, then," he said. "I shall get labor from outside."

"And you lose two thousand cords of good spruce lumber?" Larousse demanded.

Mark nodded. Nat, who had understood the drift of the conversation, pulled him by the arm.

"Listen, Mark, you can't afford to do that," he said in a low voice. "Give in to them—till that load is shipped. Then can the whole lot of them. They're asking for it."

"They're asking for what they're going to get," retorted Mark. "All right, I'll pay you off tonight," he told the men. "You can stay on here for a while, but I'll need your cabins for my new crew."

The meaning of his decision was unmistakable. Half-a-dozen women had joined the party, and a series of angry recriminations began. It was evident that the feminine part of the community had no sympathy with the strike. On the faces of the men there was, however, sullen satisfaction. Mark knew that they saw no further ahead than the Indian.

PAUL TRAINS FOR HIS LIFE WORK

LESSON TEXT—Acts 9:19b-22; 11:25, 26; Galatians 1:17-24
MEMORY SELECTION—And straightway he preached Christ in the synagogues, that he is the Son of God.—Acts 9:20.

The regenerating grace of God had made Paul into a new man, one who now had no greater delight than telling others of the redeeming grace of God.

In preparation for that fuller ministry which was to follow, Paul first gave witness in the place where he had been persecuting the Christians, in fact, in the city to which he was bound when the Lord met him. But now instead of breathing out threats and violence he met these former associates and friends with the new message of the gospel.

He had to meet them sooner or later, and it was well that he met them now. A clean break with his past makes a man ready for future service.

I. Paul Faces His Past (Acts 9:19b-22).

What a surprise it must have been for those persecutors of the Christians at Damascus to find that the one to whom they had looked for leadership was now a Christian. What a testimony that was—right to the point!

"Straightway"—what a good word to apply to the servant of the Lord. Paul did not hesitate to declare his faith in Christ, to proclaim that the One who had redeemed him was able to save others.

It is the normal and proper expression of Christian faith to give testimony to others. That should be true of every believer. With Paul there was the added element of his call to preach, for God had ordained that he should be his chosen vessel for that purpose (Acts 9:15).

Paul's message was Christ. He proved to the Jews that Jesus was the Christ (v. 22), the One of whom their Old Testament Scriptures spake and for whom they professed to be looking. He declared him to be the Son of God (v. 20).

They were unwilling to accept the message. They were "amazed" at Paul and "confounded" by the truth he proclaimed, but they rejected both it and him, and he had to escape for his life.

Although our lesson only indirectly refers to it (see Gal. 1:17, 18), it should also be noted that Paul went up to Jerusalem before he went to Antioch, as indicated in our next portion of Scripture.

There he faced suspicion on the part of the believers, who knew him as their enemy.

Having faced his past we now see that

II. Paul Faces His Future (Acts 11:25, 26).

He was God's chosen instrument to bear his name to the Gentiles (see Acts 9:15), and at the invitation of Barnabas he came up from his home city of Tarsus to minister at Antioch, the place which now became his real spiritual home, and the center from which his great missionary enterprise was carried out.

It is interesting to note how this came about in the providence of God. Persecution spread the believers abroad (Acts 11:19), and like the scattered brands of a beaten fire they carried the flame of Christianity far and wide. Thus the gospel came to Antioch, the third greatest city in the world of that day. A revival broke out and Barnabas was sent from Jerusalem to be of help.

Good and spiritual man that he was (Acts 19:23, 24), Barnabas did nothing to hinder this work of God, but admonished the people to "cleave unto the Lord"; that is, to follow him closely. Would that all spiritual advisers had such a spirit and such sound judgment.

He was also wise in sensing his need of help. So he went after Paul, the very man to teach these young Christians and to lead them out into a radiant and abundant life for the Lord. Here it was that the beautiful name of "Christian" was first used.

All this was possible because

III. Paul Faces His Lord (Gal. 1:17-24).

Many years after he had been called to Antioch, Paul wrote this letter to the Galatians to warn them against Judaizing teachers and to urge them to hold fast to salvation by faith. He declared this to be a message which he received from God and not from men.

Before Paul went out to preach and teach he went up into Arabia to be alone with the Lord, as he took what we might call his postgraduate course in theology. He learned—alone with God.

His life had been transformed. His attitudes had been completely changed. His thinking about Christ was diametrically opposite to his former beliefs. He needed time alone with God to prepare himself for the stormy but triumphant years ahead.

(X) REPUBLICAN

If you don't like shortages of food and other goods — if you don't like the higher bills you are paying — if you don't like to see veterans walking the streets looking for shelter — if you don't like the record-breaking taxes you are paying — there is something you can do about it. You can go to the polls on November 5th and voice your feeling by voting Republican. That is the American way to get back to real liberty.

From where I sit... by Joe Marsh

Want a Vacation from Marriage?

Alvin Blake went south on his vacation, for some fishing, and left his Missus to enjoy a vacation from the corn-cob pipe, clothes in a heap, and solos on the harmonica.

First few days, Martha enjoyed it—house neat and quiet, top back on the toothpaste, no morning mess from Alvin's midnight snacks (Al's partial to a bit of cheese and beer at bedtime).

Come the end of the week, she began to fidget; couldn't even read the Clarion, it looked so unmissed; didn't have any appetite with nobody to cook for. She was about to wire Al, when he barges home a week ahead of time, and she almost cries for gratitude. ("Felt the same way myself," says Al.)

From where I sit, those differences of habit and opinion—whether they have to do with corn-cob pipes, a glass of beer, or playing the harmonica, seem mighty trivial when you're separated. And they are, too!

2 Millionth Telephone Installed At Farm

Another important milestone in the history of the Illinois Bell Telephone Company has just been reached when the company's two millionth telephone was installed in the farm home of Harry Cronister, 12 miles northwest of Springfield.

An afternoon program was held at the Cronister farm to celebrate the occasion, with Illinois state officials, agricultural and farm association leaders, telephone officials, and members served.

The Rev. Lloyd Coleman will give a lecture on "Places and People of the Southwest Pacific", next Tuesday evening in the Methodist church in Marseilles, Illinois, also in their high school.

of the Cronister family present. Mr. A. H. Mellinger, president of the Illinois Bell, presented the telephone to Mrs. Cronister after the company installer, Mr. Dave Komyathy, connected and tested the instrument.

Mrs. Cronister made the first call over the telephone to an aunt, Mrs. Herman Schafer in Grand Island, Nebraska. Following this, several other demonstration calls were made, and then the entire group returned to Springfield for a special dinner at the Abraham Lincoln Hotel. Later, an evening meeting was held, at which the Bell System film, "The Farmer's Telephone" was shown, and a lecture demonstration "Magic of Communication" given.

The Illinois Bell now serves about 55,000 telephones in rural areas, an all time high. The company's $3,000,000 program to provide more and better service in rural areas has for one of its goals the installation of 21,000 new telephones in the next three years. This activity is part of the Bell System's $100,000,000 rural telephone expansion and improvement program.

To provide the Cronister and neighboring farm homes with telephone service, it was necessary to build several miles of new line. Long span construction has been employed throughout. The job involved the setting of 80 poles, and the use of 4,000 pounds of copper-steel line wire. Work of rebuilding a portion of a pole line out of Cantrall and extension of the line to serve this territory began in June.

The location of the farm is intimately associated with young Abraham Lincoln. The Cronister home is situated ed on a knoll overlooking the Sangamon River, which flows past the farm. In the early 1830's, Lincoln frequently went by this spot on flatboats and steamboats while living in the village of New Salem, just five miles down the river. It was there Lincoln clerked in a store, met Ann Rutledge, started his career as a lawyer and first entered politics. The State of Illinois has reconstructed the village as a memorial to Lincoln, and it is visited annually by thousands.

The telephone has attained remarkable development since its introduction in Illinois in 1877, just 69 years ago. In 1878, the first Bell telephone exchange was opened in Chicago with 75 telephones. Fourteen years later, in 1892, the first direct telephone line linking Illinois with New York was placed in service, and in 1915 the first telephone circuits between the Illinois Bell territory and the West Coast was opened.

The year 1924 marked the installation of the Illinois Bell's 1,000,000th telephone, which was connected at Peoria. Three years later, in 1927, the first transoceanic radiotelephone link was opened and Europe was brought within voice reach of subscribers in this area. Ship telephone service began 11 years later, in 1938 linking Great Lakes and Mississippi waterway vessels with land by radio.

This Week At Roxy

The gay, springtime story of an outdoor girl who was willing to learn about an indoor sport from a fireside athlete who knew his business is delightfully told in "The Bride Wore Boots", with Barbara Stanwyck and Robert Cummings, which will open at the Roxy theatre at Lockport Sunday for two days.

This is no horse opera, but there is plenty of horse play, being one of the horriest comedy pictures in many a year. Barbara adores horses, but Robert abhors them, and the bridal path inevitably leads to divorce. Not content with this solution, they decide to remarry. Barbara comes in from the stables to dress for her wedding and finding no one to help her off with her boots, appears for the ceremony attired in wedding dress and of all things, boots.

"Tomorrow is Forever", with Claudette Colbert and Orson Wells, will be featured at the Roxy theatre Tuesday thru Thursday.

LAW ON THE FARM

TRESPASS—Of importance to farmers is protective trespass legislation. The earliest legislation of this kind enacted in 1819 and revised in 1845, was concerned only with trespass to certain species of trees and has since been repealed.

In 1874 the legislature enacted another trespass law, intended to discourage the picking of other people's fruits. It provides that "Whoever shall enter the enclosure of any person without leave of the owner, and pick, destroy or carry away any part or portion of the fruit of any apple, pear, peach, plum or other fruit tree, vine or bush, shall be fined not exceeding $100."

At the same time, a more general law was enacted providing that "Whoever willfully enters and passes over any garden, yard, or other improved field, after being expressly forbidden so to do by the owner or occupant shall be fined not exceeding $5."

At the 1941 session of the Illinois General Assembly, this latter law was amended to read as follows: "Whoever is about to enter unlawfully upon the enclosed or unenclosed land of another and is forbidden so to do by the owner or occupant, or by his agent or servant, and thereafter enters upon such land, or whoever is unlawfully upon the enclosed or unenclosed land of another and is notified to depart therefrom by the owner, or occupant, or by his agent or servant, and neglects or refuses so to do, or whoever willfully or unnecessarily or without right enters any orchard, nursery, garden or any farm premises or improved farm land of another when a printed or written notice forbidding or prohibiting trespass in general or in any detail has been conspicuously posted or exhibited at the main entrance to such orchard, nursery, garden, farm premises or farm land, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined not less than five dollars nor more than fifty dollars." An additional penalty is provided for knowingly and willfully cutting or destroying the trees of another.

This strengthens considerably the law on trespass and gives owners and occupants more protection from negligent hunters and pleasure seekers than they have enjoyed in the past.

The acts referred to in this article may be found in the Illinois Revised Statutes, Chapter 38, Section 565, 566 and 568.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES
The subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, October 13, was:

"ARE SIN, DISEASE, AND DEATH REAL?"

The Golden Text was:

"In the way of righteousness is life; and in the pathway thereof there is no death" (Prov. 12: 28).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible:

"Brethren, I count not myself to have apprehended; but this one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus. Let us therefore, as many as be perfect, be thus minded; and if in any thing ye be otherwise minded, God should reveal even this unto you" (Phil. 3: 13-15).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy:

"There is neither place nor opportunity in Science for error of any sort. Every day makes its demands upon us for higher proofs rather than professions of Christian power. These proofs consist solely in the destruction of sin, sickness, and death by the power of Spirit, as Jesus destroyed them. This is an element of progress, and progress is the law of God, whose law demands of us only what we can certainly fulfill." (p. 232).

A handmade rug was awarded Saturday, October 12 at the Royal Blue Store and was won by Mrs. Hugh Tierney. The award was conducted by Mrs. Florence Demkov.

INSTALLING 9,000 RURAL TELEPHONES

This year, more farm and rural families are getting Illinois Bell telephone service than in any previous year of our history.

We have our $3,000,000 rural expansion and improvement program in high gear now. And, even though disturbed conditions have slowed our equipment supply, we expect to bring telephone service to a great many more people than we thought possible a year ago.

Our aim is to provide more and more service in rural areas ... and to make that service better than ever.

Rufe's Ramblings

One time when I was visiting down home a passel of the boys and I were sitting on old man Bartlett's porch talking about the rural electrification and other conveniences which have come about since my days in them parts. His Holstein bull appeared to observe that the grass was greener in the yard than it was in the pasture so he reached between a couple of strands of barbed wire, picked a good mouthful and pushed right on through. I strung up an extension cord and told the old gentleman to watch him and next time he tried it to push in the switch. Well when I got back down there for my next summer's sojourn the boys all told me what a lasting impression the scheme had made on the bull. But old man Bartlett was somewhat concerned over having to cut down on his acreage of plowed ground. "You see how far them cawn rows air from the fence", he sez to me. "Every-body wants to know if I am aiming to run a two lane highway between the plowed ground and the fence, and hit's all on account of your combination of barbed wire and 'lectricity."

And then I told him there was no danger of anything getting shocked unless the switch was pushed in, and as for the stake and rider and rail fences that wood was absolutely a nonconductor. And he looked at me and sez, "Rufe, you air just like every-body else this day and time. Talk convincing like to some feller who absolutely agrees and then leave the rest to him. Well in this particular case I believe that is a better idea than if you went to the barn and started talkin' about 'lectricity to my mules, especially after they both were reaching through the fence when I pushed in your switch."

Safety Precautions Listed
As Hunters Flock to Fields

WNU Features

With thousands of ex-G.I.s joining the nation's estimated eight million hunters who will take to the field this fall, observance of safety precautions becomes more necessary than ever before if hunting is to uphold its record as one of the nation's safest sports.

This is the caution sounded by Dot and Ernie Lind, famous exhibition shooters, who have taken time out from their coast-to-coast tour to show hunters how to avoid some of the common causes of accidents in the field.

Best short-cut to a safe hunting trip is to observe the "Ten Commandments of Safety." It's a good idea, Dot Lind suggests, to clip out the rules and to put them in your hunting case to read before unlimbering for action.

When the observance of these fundamental rules becomes second nature, hunting easily can become the safest sport in America.

POINTER . . . Point your gun away from your companions when in the field so that you can control the direction of the muzzle even if you stumble.

Ten Commandments for Hunting

1. Treat every gun with the respect due a loaded gun. This is the cardinal rule of gun safety.
2. Carry only empty guns, taken down or with the action open, into your automobile, camp and home.
3. Always be sure that the barrel and action are clear of obstructions.
4. Always carry your gun so that you can control the direction of the muzzle even if you stumble.
5. Be sure of your target before you pull the trigger.
6. Never point a gun at anything you do not want to shoot.
7. Never leave your gun unattended unless you unload it first.
8. Never climb a tree or crawl through a fence with a loaded gun.
9. Never shoot at a flat, hard surface or the surface of water.
10. Do not mix gunpowder and alcohol.

AT EASE . . . Always unload your gun when you're resting after long tramps through the field.

NO BARBS . . . Crossing fences, unload gun, open the action and place it through the fence first.

Gun-totin' Woman
Is Town 'Flatfoot'

CARRIER MILLS, ILL.—A gun-totin' policewoman is "the law" on the east side here. She is Mrs. Mary Brown, a Negro widow, who long has been interested in social work.

Regularly she patrols her beat from 4 p. m. to midnight but she insists she "hasn't been scared yet." Decked out in the customary blue suit and visored cap, Mrs. Brown sports a shiny new badge, club and pistol.

Previously employed as a guard at the state training school for girls, she was unable to get another job with the state and decided to work as a "flatfoot" instead.

No Fun in Own Job,
Resorts to Clowning

SHREWSBURY, MASS.—Because he doesn't have any fun on his own job, Walter Gleason likes to put on a clown suit and lead a parade. Gleason, 72, distinguished and graying, is the town's undertaker.

For many years drum major in the Shrewsbury brass band, he took up clowning as a hobby two decades ago. He has led parades in clown costumes some 15 times this year.

Although townfolk find it hard to realize that the local undertaker is one and the same person as the nimbly prancing clown, Gleason chuckles, "but the kids always know me."

'Honor' Parking Pays Dividend

ST. LOUIS, MO.—If Diogenes were to come to St. Louis, he would not need his famous lantern to find an honest man. All it would take would be a trip to one of the two "honor system" parking lots operated in downtown St. Louis.

After three years of operation, owners of the parking lots conclude that 95 per cent of their customers are honest. That percentage, they declare, voluntarily deposit their nickels and dimes in rusty, country-style mailboxes.

"The customers are so honest," Lewis J. Drury, who manages one of the lots, reports "that those who don't happen to have the exact change will drop a promissory note for the next day in the box."

High cost of attendants plus faith in their fellow man prompted the owners to install the system in April, 1943.

Windproof Span Designed
After Wind Tunnel Tests

By 1948, a new Tacoma Narrows Bridge will be built over Puget Sound, replacing the one that, four months after its completion in 1940, was destroyed by wind, says Collier's. The new span, the first to have its design based on wind-tunnel tests of a model, will have shock absorbers at numerous points.

It will also have air slots in the floor which will enable it to withstand a wind nearly three times as strong as that which caused the former structure to crash.

Firestone Announces

A REVOLUTIONARY NEW TRACTOR TIRE

that

OUTCLEANS • OUTPULLS • OUTLASTS

ANY OTHER TRACTOR TIRE

FIRESTONE scores again with a revolutionary new tractor tire . . . the FIRESTONE CHAMPION GROUND GRIP . . . which outcleans, outpulls, and outlasts every other tractor tire. The results of actual field tests, shown below, prove what this tire will do for you on your tractor.

CLEAN UP TO 100% MORE EFFECTIVELY . . .
The traction bars curve like a plowshare . . . flare outward to make a wider exit for mud and trash. The bars join in the center—no open centers to pick up trash and clog the whole tread. When the going is really tough, that's when Champion Ground Grips clean up to 100% more effectively.

PULL UP TO 62% MORE AT THE DRAWBAR . . .
The pyramid-type, curved traction bars cut deeply into the soil with wedge-like action. The joined bars provide a powerful "center bite" right in the heart of the traction zone. This patented tread design gives up to 62% more drawbar pull.

LAST UP TO 91% LONGER . . . Extra high traction bars, buttressed at the base and Triple-Braced in the center, have greater strength and stability. They don't bend, break nor push through the cord body. They last longer on the highway because they don't bounce nor wobble like unconnected bars. Under extreme conditions they give up to 91% longer traction life.

See the new Firestone Champion Ground Grip at your nearest Implement Dealer, Firestone Dealer Store or Firestone Store today. And when you order a new tractor, be sure to specify Firestone Champion Ground Grips.

Wall Brackets Add Charm to the Room

OF ALL the things that a beginner in woodworking can make, nothing adds so much interest and charm to any room as a well designed set of wall brackets. This group of three makes a most satisfying arrangement over the sofa in the living room.

However, they would be just as much at home anywhere else in the house—even in the kitchen, bathroom or hall. Pattern 263 gives actual-size cutting guides and complete directions for making these brackets. A copy of this pattern may be obtained by sending 15c with name and address direct to:

How to help your child fight FEAR OF DARKNESS

...as recommended in the interest of child welfare by Rose G. Anderson, Ph. D., Director of the Psychological Service Center of N. Y.

1 Fear of the dark is founded on a dread of the unknown. Many a grown man feels his courage ebb with the daylight. And to a child, whose limited experience makes him even more fearful, the dark can be filled with terrors which may affect his emotional adjustment.

2 Bring back the daylight world he knows, with your "Eveready" flashlight... show that the yard, or the basement, is the same familiar place by night as by day. Or that mysterious night-time sounds are made by simple things—rattling shades, moving branches, pets. Let him use your flashlight himself—or, better still, get him one of his own. Then—

For EXTRA POWER, EXTRA LIFE—AT NO EXTRA COST

FOR ANY flashlight use, rely on "Eveready" batteries. Their reputation for longer life of brighter light has made them the largest-selling flashlight batteries in the world—and justly! Ask your dealer for "Eveready" batteries by name; their extra light, extra life cost you nothing extra!

PICK YOUR CORN EARLY!

Dry It In Crib, with Behlen All-Steel
Ventilators and Tunnels

New, modern, fast way to dry corn.
No more waiting for corn to dry in fields. Pick early, when mechanical pickers work best. Crib it, and let Behlen Ventilators and Tunnels dry corn faster than you ever dreamed possible.

GOODBYE TO CORN BORERS!

Agricultural colleges and experimental stations recommend picking early, to help control corn borers. You get your corn into cribs to dry, and shred or chop stalks and plow under before ground freezes, to kill the borers.

Behlen Tunnels not only ventilate, but are very handy for shelling. Just run sheller "drag" into tunnel, as at left. Pull out tunnel sections one by one. Corn drops onto conveyor belt. Saves hours of labor!

COME IN NOW!

Don't wait. We have Behlen All-Steel Ventilators and Corn Tunnels on hand now. But due to present industrial situation, we cannot promise we will get any more this fall. We strongly urge you to come in right away, while we are still able to supply you. Cost is less than for old-style wood ventilators.

Patents Pending on Behlen All-Steel Ventilators, Tunnels, and Dehydrators
